 ${\it Max \, Knickerbocker \, (Peter \, Coyote), \, an \, inventive \, aviator \, of \, the \, 1920s, \, is \, heroized \, by \, his \, grands on \, Jonathan \, (Huckleberry \, Fox)}$

2/THE DISNEY CHANNEL NOVEMBER, 1985

"Haven't you wondered, maybe even fantasized, about someone in your family you never had known?" asks Peter Coyote.

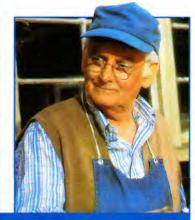

"I'm sure we all have, and that's what attracted me to this script. A little boy goes back in time to actually meet his grandfather, who'd died long before the lad was born. They form a close, loving relationship—and by doing so they challenge fate itself."

Coyote is talking about "The Blue Yonder," a made-for-The Disney Channel movie, written and directed by Mark Rosman (see page 15). Coyote portrays the grandfather as a young aviator of the 1920s, determined to make the first transatlantic flight. Ten-year-old Huckleberry Fox of "Terms of Endearment" plays his grandson. Academy Award winner Art Carney makes a special appearance as the boy's neighbor. The picture was produced by Susan Landau, Alan Shapiro and Annette Handley, who were responsible for The Disney Channel's prize-winning baseball drama, "Tiger Town."

Married and the father of two children, Peter Coyote is concerned about the film fare offered young people today.

"I'm sorry so many movies pander to the worst instincts," he says. "I look at some of the people who are making movies for teenagers and I think of how hard one struggles to instill values in one's children and some jackass is urging them to be druggies or killers. Thankfully there are a lot of adolescents whose principles rise above power and sex, in spite of what they see."

Coyote's quarrel with amoral image-makers began in his youth, when he joined the counterculture revolution of the 1960s. "America was called to task by her children back then, and I remember those years with a sense of pride," he says. Coyote enrolled in a writing program at San Francisco State

Frank Simons as a young Art Carney, a century old farmhouse, and University, decided he was a "lousy" poet, attended various acting workshops, and finally hooked up with the touring San Francisco Mime Troupe. "We won an Obie Award in New York, at which point I realized that if we could win a medal for parodying the American middle class and its values, then pantomime theater was not a vehicle for social change." So Coyote quit acting and for 10 years traveled around the country in his truck, living from hand to mouth. He remembers one desolate period when he survived by selling earrings he'd made from the feathers of dead birds.

By the mid-Seventies Coyote was ready to reenlist in the 9-to-5 world. Through a friend, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Gary Snyder, he became chairman of the California Council for the Arts. Eventually, preferring to pursue acting instead of politics, he joined the Magic Theatre in San Francisco and in 1980 went on to originate one of the starring roles in the world premiere of Sam Shepard's "True West." Then came 12 movies in five years, including "E.T.," "Cross Creek," "Endangered Species," "Heartbreakers" and "Jagged Edge," the latter costarring Jeff Bridges and Glenn Close.

"The Blue Yonder" was shot on locations in and around Santa Rosa, Calif., and Coyote mentions a singular farmhouse which became a focal setting for the picture.

"It's over a hundred years old and Ed Linotti, the owner, is living in the Jazz Age," he says. "Everything in the house belongs to the 1920s. You walk into the kitchen and there's a stove and refrigerator right out of the Roaring Twenties. There's a 60-year-old dining room set in mint condition. The bedroom's authentic, too. Ed showed me his 1927 Lincoln, which he bought in 1974 with only 6,000 miles on it.

"Ed wears cotton pants and shirt, suspenders, and round wire-rimmed glasses. He's so adamant about maintaining his 'lifestyle,' that when somebody put a modern plastic milk container in his vintage refrigerator, he went on a tirade that lasted almost an hour. According to Ed, 'If you let plastic creep into your life, it just stays there.'"

Coyote thinks in five-year intervals. After devoting the next five years to acting, he plans to take up directing and producing. "I've spent several summers at Sundance, Robert Redford's film workshop in Utah," he says. "I may try directing a project there. I've also hung out with David Puttnam, a producer, and he has me thinking about producing."

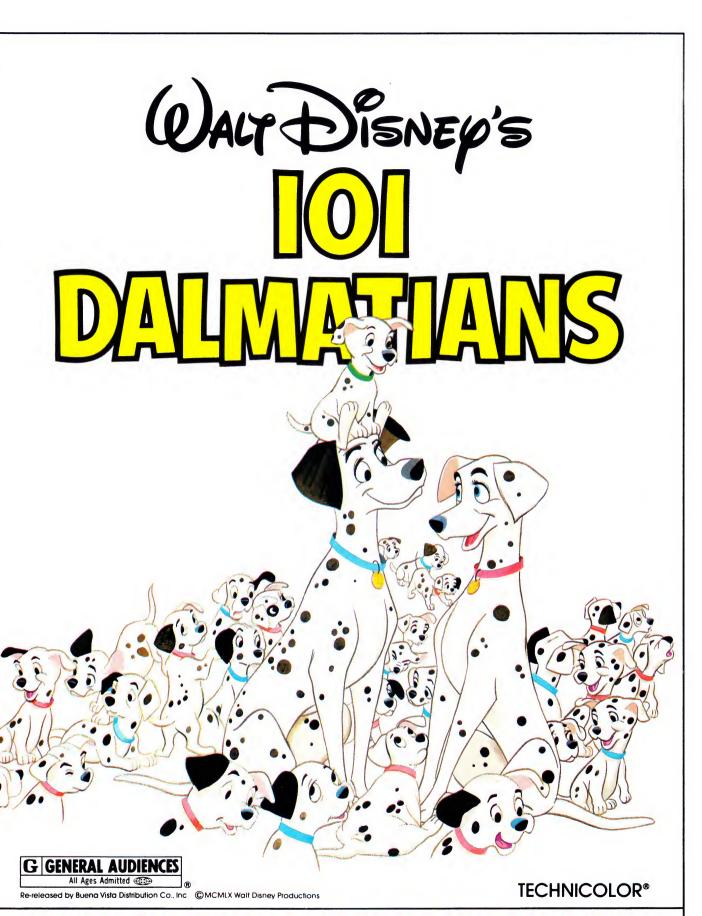

If given a film to produce, Coyote would turn to the Sixties. During his 10-year counterculture odyssey, he lived in communes and among the hippies of Haight-Ashbury in San Francisco.

"I'd like to do a picture about the Sixties because nobody has seen a film or read about the people I knew," he says. "Haight Street was like the frontier of the old West. You could die on Haight Street as quickly as you could die in Dodge City.

"The people there were on the edge of the precipice, dancing and laughing in the face of death. Many of them were brilliant, but outlaw communities always do attract the best—and worst."

Peter Coyote meets his future grandson, Huckleberry Fox

COMING FOR THE HOLIDAYS TO THEATRES EVERYWHERE.

Donnelly Rhodes, a marine veterinarian, and seaplane pilot Deborah Wakeman fly the rugged coast and wild interiors of the Pacific Northwest on daring rescue missions in The Disney Channel's exclusive new adventure series, "Danger Bay."

hen Donnelly Rhodes (Doc Roberts) and Deborah Wakeman (Joyce Carter) — stars of the new action-adventure series "Danger Bay"— take to the skies, they may appear to be seasoned pilots. But looks can be deceiving.

The challenge for their stand-ins Steve Wright, the series' helicopter coordinator, and Greg McDougall, a seaplane pilot, is making sure the two stars look like pros.

It's all in a day's work, but the job does have its minor quirks — especially for the heavily bearded Wright. Before filming, his beard is sprayed silver, then wrapped in a flesh-colored stocking that winds about his mouth and knots on top of his head.

(Both he and McDougall must don wavy chestnut wigs when they stand in for Deborah Wakeman.) By the time he's ready for take-off, Wright can no longer talk. But he can still fly!

The soaring flight scenes are meticulously choreographed and tirelessly rehearsed both on the ground and in the air. Wright also inspects every inch of the area beneath the flight path to eliminate potential hazards such as unexpected telephone wires.

"Ironically the biggest hazards are people," Wright admits. "Oddly, those who work around helicopters all the time are the most accident prone. Less experienced people tend to be much more nervous — and a lot more careful."

For air-to-air scenes, Wright and McDougall work out precise maneuvers before taking off. McDougall goes up with Deborah Wakeman. While she "flies" the plane using fake controls, McDougall does the actual piloting, staying out of camera range but in constant radio contact with the helicopter camera ship. As the seaplane maneuvers through the predetermined pattern, the helicopter hovers nearby with a cameraman strapped to and dangling from an open door.

"It's really quite safe," McDougall says. "Personally, I'm more afraid of being seen on the ground wearing that wig than of anything happening in flight!" 👻

Ine Magic Christmas:

A New Movie Rekindles The Old Magic

or those of you who want to see how the glory of Christmas can transform even the bleakest reality, Walt Disney Pictures proudly presents "One Magic Christmas." Opening November 22nd, this movie is a poignant contemporary fantasy/drama that is the Disney Studio's heartfelt holiday gift to moviegoers the world over.

"One Magic Christmas" stars Academy Award winner Mary Steenburgen as Ginnie Grainger, a disillusioned young woman who gets a new lease on life after a miraculous holiday experience. Newcomer Gary Basaraba plays Jack, her loving husband, and Harry Dean Stanton plays Gideon, the mysterious stranger whose appearance in town initiates a fantastic turn of events.

Elizabeth Harnois and Robbie Magwood play Abbie and Cal,

the Grainger children.

The setting for the movie is the small town of Medford at Christmastime. All the townspeople are joyously celebrating the holiday season. Everybody, that is, except the Grainger family, who are experiencing hard times as a result of Jack's recent layoff from the factory where he worked. In addition to losing their rented house, Ginnie, who works at the checkout counter at the local supermarket, is unhappy and despairing as the approach of Christmas adds more pressures to an already stress-filled existence. As Christmas Eve draws nearer, however, a series of events that first seem tragic, then mysterious, and finally miraculous draw the family into an adventure that enables them to realize great joy and happiness.

Mary Steenburgen had remained loyal to the project of "One Magic Christmas" for more than a year before filming began. Director Phillip Borsos ("The Grey Fox," "The Mean Season") and producer Fred Roos ("The Godfather, Part II," "The Black Stallion") add that Steenburgen's steadfast love for the project was one of the key factors in getting the picture produced.

THE DISNEY CHANNEL/9

In speaking of her character, Steenburgen says, "Ginnie is a survivor. She'd rip and claw to protect her family. However, she's not strong-willed in ambition. She has one dream, to have a house, but she's threatened because her husband is out of work and they have no money."

"Ginnie is rather like Scrooge," points out screenwriter Thomas Meehan, adding, "'One Magic Christmas' is intentionally a latter-day 'Christmas Carol.'" Ginnie experiences certain adventures which are somewhat the equivalent of Scrooge's dreams. It's also a deliberate attempt to make a modern day Capra-esque movie in the spirit of "It's a Wonderful Life," but with hard edges expressing the toughness of life in the 1980s.

As in Frank Capra's warmhearted films, and fantasies such as "The Bishop's Wife," fact and fancy blend in "One Magic Christmas." A particularly imaginative sequence takes place in Santa's workshop. There, from a steam-powered factory operated by antique machinery and belts, spew goodies of every description. Overhead baseball bats rotate on lathes, 700 pounds of pre-wrapped candy canes pour from the spout of a stainless-steel tank, rafts of bicycles are tested on a rolling ramp. One area of the workshop features a collection of 150 dolls from Europe and North America, some dating back to 1890. Another features a collection of 60 antique train sets.

At the heart of "One Magic Christmas" is the affirmation that most adults, if they care to admit it, keep a special spirit of child-hood intact which allows them to create the holiday magic of hope and renewal.

lliott Gould is endearing as Noah Dugan, a hard-living, out-of-work aviator, and Genevieve Bujold is demure and lovely as missionary Bernadette Lafleur in "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark." The star of the show, however, may be a hulking dilapidated B-29 bomber. With two stowaway kids and a bunch of farm animals in the hold, the plane crash-lands on an unmapped island en route to Bernadette's mission. Their challenge is to convert the plane wreck into a seagoing vessel.

AAAAA

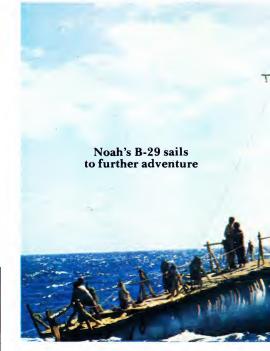

On screen, the plane's transformation is accomplished with a little ingenuity and help from two Japanese engineers—holdouts on the island from World War II. Behind the scenes, however, Disney Productions' engineers and special effects crew used five different planes.

The first problem that Danny Lee, head of Disney's special-effects department, had was to locate B-29s he could use. He discovered that there were only two in the world that were flyable. One was owned by a plane collector, Ralph

Johnston, in Oakland, California; the other by a flying club called the Confederate Air Force. He hired Johnston's plane and its seven-man crew for a week of filming the in-flight scenes. (The plane was subsequently used in "The Right Stuff" as well.)

For the other film sequences, Disney's crew used four B-29s salvaged from a U.S. Navy boneyard near China Lake in northern California. (By law, the planes were not for sale, so Disney arranged a six-month lease, after which the bombers were returned to the Navy.) Expert mechanics were hired to dismantle the four planes, color-code the parts and ship two to Los Angeles and two to Hawaii.

"To get the B-29 down the narrow road to the beach took 18 trips with a trailer," explains Bigger. "Then we needed a crane to unload the parts and another crane to get them to the beach. Just to get the pieces on the beach took three days."

"To get the B-29 down the narrow road to the beach took 18 trips with a trailer."

The next challenge was to float the bomber upside down as an ark. A fully equipped B-29 weighs 72,000 pounds, Another was constructed to float in a tank at MGM (the same tank that but by replacing its four engines with fiberglass-and-aluminum mock-ups, installing lightweight fiberglass propellers, and stripping the fuselage of unneeded equipment, the aircraft was slimmed to a trim 30,000 pounds.

The hull of the plane was pumped full of foam to give the 30,000 pound craft 70,000 pounds of flotation.

The ultimate test of seaworthiness came from Kauai's 8- to 10-foot ocean swells, but it turned out to be more of a test for the actors than for the plane. The old bomber took the waves with comparative ease. Two bailing pumps worked continuously to empty the fuse-lage of water that steadily seeped in through the 35-year-old rivets. In addition, the hull of the plane was pumped full of foam to give the 30,000 pound craft 70,000 pounds of flotation.

The extra buoyancy was of no help to the film's stars, however, who suffered from bouts of seasickness. "It wasn't so bad up on the deck," says the film's director, Charles Jarrott, "but down below, shut in with the whole film crew, it was crowded and seasick-making."

But far away from filmmaking's problems, the movie-viewing audience sees only the silvery upside-down bomber being taken out to sea by its huge, patchwork sail. No water leaks, no nausea. Why, it looks just as easy as Dugan and the missionary falling in love.

THOSE CALLOWAYS

Exclusive movie starring Brian Keith, Vera Miles

When strong-willed Cam Calloway (Brian Keith) goes against an entire Vermont town to save a wild marshland from becoming a hunter's paradise, he stakes his livelihood, marriage, and ultimately his life on the outcome. November 10, 13, 18, 20, 23, 26, 28

THIRD MAN ON THE MOUNTAIN

Exclusive movie starring
Michael Rennie

We received a mountain of ballots selecting this cliffhanging drama as your "Play It Again Cinema" winner.

Shot in the Swiss Alps, the film heroizes Rudi Matt (James MacArthur), a young mountaineer who risks his life trying to scale the impregnable peak which killed his father.

THE CHANNEL'S CHOICE

We recommend two outstanding Oscar winners and entertaining episodes from an acclaimed animated cartoon series for your family's viewing pleasure this month.

PRIME TIME PROGRAMS WITH ADULT APPEAL

"The Red Shoes"

This four-star landmark film integrates dance into storytelling, with unforgettable performances by Anton Walbrook, Emeric Pressburger, and Moira Shearer as a beautiful, lovelorn prima ballerina. It received two Academy Awards.

"Breaking the Sound Barrier"

Here is a dashing, realistic drama of early jet aviation and the test pilots who challenged the terrifying sound barrier. Directed by David Lean, whose credits include "A Passage to India," "Dr. Zhivago" and "The Bridge on the River Kwai," it, too, earned an Academy Award.

PROGRAMS FOR CHILDREN

"The Raccoons"

Each month we bring you an episode in the animated cartoon lives of the Raccoons and their canine friend Schaeffer. These forest dwellers are forever in conflict with the villainous aardvark Cyril Sneer, and their lively, amusing adventures often contain a moral.

Davy & pals begin river race

DAVY CROCKETT AND THE RIVER PIRATES

Movie starring Fess Parker, Buddy Ebsen, Jeff York

Davy Crockett, king of the wild frontier, is back! — this time as a folk hero embroiled with legendary Mike Fink, king of the river.

Based on colorful characters from American folklore, these new adventures take Mike and Davy on an epic keelboat race down the Mississippi to New Orleans. Later they team up to wipe out river pirates along the broad Ohio.

Although the story is fictional, it was filmed in actual locations including the notorious Cave-in-Rock where pirates lured river travelers to their doom.

The dangerous keelpole fight was staged aboard two keelboats on the fast-flowing Ohio. Actors costumed as river rascals lunged at each other with the heavy 14-foot poles. They tumbled into the water, and continued their film fight even as the swift current carried them far downriver. Rescue boats picked them up when the scene was over.

We're All Ears

Linda Palmer Subscriber Services Director

Dear Friends:

Have you caught the excitement? I have. I'm all revved up over our Spirit of Flight Festival this month.

I am particularly pleased about our high-flying hit movie, "The Blue Yonder," made by and for The Disney Channel. It takes a 10-year-old boy back to the 1920s and a fateful meeting with his then-young grandfather, a daredevil aviator. Our program executive, Carol Rubin, calls this a three-hankie movie. I'm sure you will enjoy it.

Did you notice that we're also presenting the Academy Award-winning musical, "Oliver!", on the Channel this month? It features one of my favorite songs, "Consider Yourself." Try to set some time aside for this special attraction.

If you want a sneak peek at December's terrific lineup of entertainment, check the back cover of this Magazine. I'm told there will be some surprises too!

Sincerely,

Linda Palmer

FEEDBACK FROM VIEWERS

The Disney Channel Magazine is really the only reliable source of program listings we have. The others have partial and often incorrect information. Thank you for your fine service. It alone is worth our subscription

We also appreciate your concern for viewer input. That, too, gives The Disney Channel excellence.

> Linda Courtney Michigan City, IN

We just finished watching "The Golden Seal" on our favorite channel, The Disney Channel. We were transported into the story. The superb writing, acting, and all! I had tears flowing freely down my face. The fight between good and evil, with good winning. The beautiful love between that lovely child and the golden seal. Thank you, etc. etc. etc. I'm so grateful!

EVERYTHING'S DUCKY FOR ROSANNE

I just had to let you know how pleased I am with the revamping you've done on "Donald Duck Presents." It seemed to be just a hodgepodge of cartoons. Now the half hour seems to be a well thought-out program with a variety of cartoon selections. My children and I are once again watching "Donald Duck Presents."

> Rosanne Saenz-Fissore San Ramon, CA

"STRANGERS" NOW ON VIDEOTAPE

My daughter and I recently watched "Too Smart for Strangers" on The Disney Channel. It was an excellent film, utilizing the Pooh Corner characters to teach children how to deal with abuse or situations which could lead to abduction. I am interested in obtaining a copy of this program for both private and professional use. I would appreciate any assistance you could provide.

> Randall H. Wells, M.D. Little Rock, AR

"Too Smart for Strangers" is now available for purchase as a videocassette from Walt Disney Home Video. Please ask your video dealer to order a copy if he doesn't carry it.

HURRAH FOR "HEIDI"

Have enjoyed your channel over a year now, and have wanted to commend you on your programming. Especially appreciated the "Heidi" series—the most delightful I've seen.

Our family members have their own favorites, so it would take two pages to list them all. We have six children!

Exploring the Archives

Dave Smith, archivist for Walt Disney Productions, answers questions and provides information about the studio's history and its productions.

When did Disney begin producing newspaper comic strips?

—R.S., Youngstown, OH

The first Disney comic strip was the daily Mickey Mouse strip which debuted on January 13, 1930, distributed by King Features Syndicate (see below).

Did Walt Disney animate any scenes himself in the Disney cartoons?

—M.Z., Hamden, CT

When Walt Disney first started his company in 1923, he was an animator and he animated on the earliest Alice Comedies, which combined cartoon figures with live action. However, he soon realized that he could hire artists who could animate much better than he, so Walt turned to story work and direction. Thus it is extremely rare to even find a sketch drawn by Walt Disney after the mid-1920s.

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

As we celebrate Mickey's birthday on November 18, we need to recall that it is Minnie's birthday too. She also made her first appearance in "Steamboat Willie."

Peter Firth, who appears in "Diamonds on Wheels" (see page 17), gained fame later on as the boy in "Equus," on both stage and screen.

Make A Paper Plane

Head straight for adventure with Jonathan and his grandfather in THE BLUE YONDER November 17, 20, 23, 27, and 29. Then make your own paper model of a plane like the one in the movie, following the directions here.

1. After completing the activity on the other side, remove this page and glue it to a piece of construction paper.

2. Cut the plane out along the dark, outer lines. Cut or fold where indicated by dotted lines. Tape to hold.

3. Cut out the rudder, wheels and propeller and fold. Make a slit in the plane's tail and insert the rudder tab. Tape the wheels where shown on the model. Make a slit where indicated on the front of the plane and also in the center of the propeller. Fasten the propeller to the front with a small paper brad.

Create a Thanksgiving

Mickey and the others are busy preparing Thanksgiving dinner. They've created an unusual and funny centerpiece for their table—and it's made of vegetables!
Why not make one yourself? You can decorate your table and have fun doing it. Here's how:

Reggie, The Veggie Gobbler

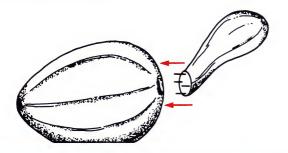

You'll need:

1 acorn squash 1 butternut squash Several lettuce leaves Several red radishes Toothpicks Paper clips

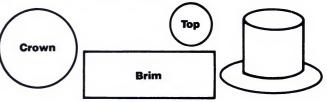

1 sheet brown or black construction paper

Directions:

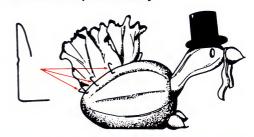

1. Wash and gently pat vegetables dry. With an adult's help, cut a slice on one side of the acorn squash so turkey body will sit firmly. Cut the narrow end of the butternut squash at an angle and attach to acorn squash with toothpicks. (See picture.)

- 2. Attach radishes for turkey's beak and feet. Drape a thin slice of red cabbage over beak for a wattle. Use radish slices for eyes.
- 3. Cut hat shapes (as shown) from construction paper and tape together.

4. At the last minute, attach a tail of lettuce leaves by bending several paper clips as shown and pushing the open ends through the leaf and into the acorn squash body.
